Happy New Year!

Happy New Year and welcome back from what I hope was an enjoyable holiday season! 2017 promises to be an exciting and productive year as we engage in all aspects of FEH BOCES programming to enhance the educational experience for all of our school age and adult learners throughout the region. Our work in providing and supporting rigorous and relevant learning experiences is more important than ever as the US and world cultures and economies continue experience rapid change. Our challenge is to meet the technical skill needs of our students, while at the same time providing a well-rounded education to prepare students to full engage as adult citizens in our society. The work is challenging and I have full confidence that working together as a team we are prepared to meet the challenge!

Capital Project Update

As mentioned in the last edition of News & Notes the Capital Project vote date has been set for September 21, 2017. Rodney Asse, Jason Jantzi (our architect) and I will be meeting with all component boards during the first quarter of 2017 to provide an overview of the project. These presentations begin this coming week with a presentation to the Malone Board. The following week we travel to Lake Placid and Long Lake. I encourage you to actively share the high quality work that we do, with people that you interact with in the community. Having the community well versed in the work we do will be critical in building support for the project.

Recruitment is Underway

Recruitment of staff is a constant process for FEH BOCES and our component school districts. We provide a recruitment service that supports several of our districts in this work. We utilize a variety of print and social media for this work. I encourage you to share information about openings here at the BOCES and in our component districts.
